Fund Manager's Report

The Fund (Class USD) increased by 1.49% during the month of May 2021, underperforming the benchmark by 42bps.

Despite the rising inflation concerns that Fed might have to tighten earlier due to positive economic data surprises, developed markets were able to gain higher with S&P 500 Index, MSCI Europe Index and MSCI Japan index rising by 1.76%, 5.81% and 3.44% respectively in MYR term. US Dollar and Japanese Yen appreciated by 1.6% and 0.3% whereas the Euro depreciated by 1.7%. The US 10-year bond yield retreated to 1.5704% at the time of writing.

Fundamentals are positive for developed markets. US and Europe manufacturing PMIs continue to rebound higher with faster vaccination rollout and ease of restrictions. Japan PMI is edging slightly lower due to the recent announced state of emergencies and movement restrictions. However, it's showing resilience and is expected to recover as Japan vaccine rollout gathers pace with more vaccines approved, large inoculation centers opened and contracts to acquire more doses of vaccines secured by the government. The 12m forward corporate earnings are revised higher for all developed markets led by US (+4.2%) and Europe (+4.7%). Core PCE rose by 3.1% in April compared to last year and 0.7% higher the past month, both higher than expectation. Wage is rising higher due to labor shortage. However, May nonfarm payrolls is slightly lower than expectations. Unemployment rate fell to 5.8% but labor force participation rate also fell to 61.6%. The Fed has indicated reluctance to start tapering earlier as they see the short-term inflation being transitory and there is still a long way to reach full-employment. Both ECB and BOJ has also indicated no major shift in monetary policy in the foreseeable future.

We maintain overweight in all developed markets as we think the global economy would continue its recovery over the next 12 months with the continued rollout of vaccines and fiscal & monetary policy support. Despite the rising inflation expectations in the near term, we think central banks will stay accommodative until the economy recovery trajectory is ensured, full employment and inflation target is achieved. We are most overweight in Europe as the vaccine rollouts are catching up with US after a slow start and the economies would be positioned for a growth rebound, particularly in the services sector when movement restrictions are eased.
