MARKET REVIEW (1 OCTOBER 2024 TO 31 DECEMBER 2024)

The fourth quarter of 2024 ("Q42024") saw global financial markets navigating a mix of caution and optimism. October 2024 was challenging, with most major indices experiencing declines due to economic uncertainties and shifting investor sentiment. However, November 2024 brought a shift in momentum as central banks, including the US Federal Reserve (the "Fed") and the European Central Bank, implemented rate cuts to support growth. This helped equities recover, with US markets leading the rebound.

Singapore's Real Estate Investment Trusts ("S-REITs") demonstrated resilience throughout the quarter, attracting strong retail investor interest, especially during price declines. Larger S-REITs saw the highest net retail inflows of the year, as investors took advantage of lower valuations despite the sector facing some short-term pressure.

December 2024 ended on a more cautious note, as global markets pulled back slightly amid persistent inflation concerns and the potential impact of future monetary policy adjustments. Despite this, global equities delivered strong returns for the year, with the US economy maintaining steady growth, driven by consumer spending.

MARKET OUTLOOK*

Global markets remain at a crossroads, balancing optimism over monetary easing with concerns about inflation and economic resilience. The impact of recent rate cuts will be a key focus, as central banks assess whether further adjustments are needed to sustain growth without reigniting inflationary pressures. The U.S. economy, supported by consumer spending, is expected to maintain moderate expansion, though labor market trends and corporate earnings will influence investor sentiment. In Europe, fiscal policies aimed at energy and infrastructure could provide some stability, while Asia's outlook hinges on China's recovery momentum and Japan's continued monetary support.

Market volatility is likely to persist as investors react to economic data, corporate earnings, and geopolitical developments. Sectors tied to technology and innovation may see renewed interest if borrowing costs remain favorable, while defensive industries could attract cautious investors amid lingering macroeconomic uncertainties.

INVESTMENT STRATEGY

The Fund will continue to remain fully invested in the Target Fund with minimal cash kept for liquidity purposes. Our asset allocation decision will continue to be subjected by market conditions.
